Canada, do you want us or not?

Citizenship reform.
Proposed changes have newcomers wondering

Ottawa's proposed citizenship reform will punish good immigrants by putting up more hurdles to becoming full-fledged members of society, many newcomers say.

They say restricting citizenship won't strengthen the value of Canadian citizenship — an argument Immigration Minister Chris Alexander made Thursday — but discourage newcomers from full civic participation. Some even wonder if Canada is still a welcoming country.

"The Canadian government is sending a mixed message to newcomers. On one hand, they are saying, 'We welcome you and we want you,'" said Anil Paul, 35, an IT security consultant from India. "But their policies are contradictory."

Paul, who came to Canada in 2004 under the skilled-workers program but only applied for citizenship in 2012, said there is already "rigorous" checks and balances in the current system to weed out ineligible applicants.

"This is an overkill," said Paul, who has missed out on many job opportunities that require Canadian citizenship. "If this is about clearing the backlog, they should put in extra resources and not further restrict the process."

Ariana Adibrad, who heads a Toronto immigrant self-advocacy group for citizenship, said the proposed changes are disappointing because they further punish the good immigrants who are eager to become good citizens.

"There are always some bad people out there. We recognize that they should be punished. But the majority of immigrants are good, hardworking people," said Adbrad, who came here with her family from Iran in 2008 and only obtained her citizenship last year.

"When you are not a citizen, you can't fully engage and invest in your new life."

Journalists demand release of reporters

Egypt. Canadian has been held for over a month, now faces serious charges

When John Greyson heard last December that a Canadian journalist had been detained in Cairo, the news was déjà vu.

Greyson, a filmmaker and professor at York University, was held in an Egyptian jail for seven weeks last year. Now he's lending his voice to calls for the Canadian government to do more to help Mohamed Fahmy, a Canadian-Egyptian journalist who has been jailed in Cairo since Dec. 29.

"Mohamed is still in jail precisely because he's mainstream and his work is making a difference," Greyson said Thursday at a news conference hosted by Canadian Journalists for Free Expression (CJFE).

Fahmy was working for Al Jazeera English when he was detained with Australian correspondent Peter Greste and Egyptian producer Baher Mohamed. Abdullah Al Shami, a reporter for Al Jazeera Arabic, is also in custody.

Reports say Fahmy has been held in a dank, insect-infested segregation cell. "That's where your heart goes and that's where your mind goes when you're thinking about the cold and you're thinking about the food and you're thinking about the lack of access to health care," Greyson said.

But the bigger issue is the charges against him, which include harming Egypt's image abroad and belonging to the Muslim Brotherhood.

Greyson and other journalists call the charges "ludicrous."

"Journalism is not terrorism," said Tom Henheffer, executive director for CJFE. "We believe the Egyptian government is doing great harm to freedom of expression and democracy by criminalizing the day-to-day work of journalists."

The Egyptian government is cracking down on journalists, said Dave Enders, Fahmy's friend and colleague.

Fahmy had been reporting on the arrests of other journalists and the arrests of activists, stories he knew would get him in trouble, Enders said.

"He was very much aware of the dangers and he did say to me, in one of the last messages I got from him, 'Make some noise when I get arrested.'"

If at Fords you don't succeed, try YouTube

Mayor Rob Ford and Coun. Doug Ford are launching the YouTube show they had promised.

The first episode of "Ford Nation" will be released on Feb. 10.

A 30-second YouTube preview posted Thursday concludes with Rob Ford saying, "Please judge me on my record, not my personal life."

It begins with banter: Rob accuses Doug of having a "big belly" and asks what his favourite food is; Doug Ford responds that this is "the pot calling the kettle black."

The Fords' Newstalk 1010 radio show, "The City," was cancelled in November in the wake of the mayor's crack cocaine scandal. Their Sun News TV show was cancelled later that month, after one episode.

A news release from the mayor's press secretary said the show will be produced by "volunteers." The show will "cover a wide range of topics, from politics to sports and community," the release said, and will allow the Fords to "connect with a broader audience." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Looking for Mister Jay

This could be the beginning of a beautiful relationship. Texas woman hopes to reconnect with T.O. man she met in N.Y.C.

PHOEBE HO
toronto@metronews.ca

Is this you?

Texas woman asks: "Are you Jay or do you know Jay, who trades penny stocks, loves Super Bowls, lives in Toronto; and met Tessie from Fort Worth at the Marriott in Times Square on Jan. 30, 2014?"

One glance, a brief conversation and a missed opportunity has had Tesina Painter, or Tessie, reeling with regret for days since she met, and subsequently "left" Jay, "a penny stock trader from Toronto," last Thursday in New York City.

It was love-at-first-sight, she says, and now the 48-year-old commercial real-estate agent from Fort Worth, Texas, is pulling out all the stops to find him again.

Their conversation lasted only 10 minutes, when they happened to meet at the Marriott in Times Square where Painter was having dinner with her clients and Jay was staying for his big Super Bowl weekend. Painter was on her way to the washroom when they met.

"He almost fell over turning his body to meet my eyes and come speak to me," she says. "We spoke as if we had known each other forever."

Within minutes, the two were talking about the future, making travel plans and finishing each other's sentences. By the end of the conversation, he was already calling her "his girlfriend," and nicknamed her "Houston," the only city he's visited in Texas.

But Jay had to return to his friends and she still had to use the restroom. They promised to meet each other in that exact same spot when they're both finished to exchange contact information. And there he was, Painter says, standing there as she came out moments later.

Painter's plan was to get back to her table and make up some excuse for her clients to leave without her. Before she knew it though, they were rushing her out the door, with her following behind, and Jay "looking like someone punched him."

"It has to do with the anxiety I get," she explains. "I'm so cool with so many things, I've spoken in front of a lot of crowds, I do all kinds of stuff, but when it comes to something romantic, I freeze."

By the time she got back to her senses, Painter was already in a cab heading off with her clients. She managed to get them all back to the Marriott nearly two hours later, but Jay was long gone.

Since their meeting, she's tried contacting the Marriott, searched high and low on Facebook and even contacted a private investigator in hopes of meeting Jay again. So far, she's had no luck. That's when she reached out to Metro.

A photo of Tesina Painter taken the day she met "Jay" in N.Y.C. She was also wearing the same clothing. CONTRIBUTED

After several failed relationships since her husband passed away over a decade ago, Painter, a mother of four, says she wants a memorable Valentine's Day this year, and she's determined to make it happen.

She's calling out to Jay, or anyone who might know him, to get in touch with her at tessielovesjay@gmail.com.

Brampton. School sleepover after field trip delayed

For once, it was OK to sleep at school.

When bad weather delayed the Grade 6s at Balmoral Drive Public School from leaving for their three-day field trip on Wednesday, their teachers acted quickly and arranged for an in-school sleepover.

At night, the preteens took part in their own slumber-party games created by the teachers to make up for the loss of one night up north — from outdoor hikes and ice-hill slides, to leadership activities and watching Pirates of the Caribbean before lights out.

"We were supposed to leave at noon (Wednesday).... It was snowing and we were told that we wouldn't be able to go, because when schoolbuses are cancelled, you're not allowed to take a bus — even on a field trip," explained Grade 6 French-immersion teacher Robin Pitkin. "We were really disappointed — the kids had brought all their stuff to school."

Then phys ed teacher Noah VanSickle suggested the 34 students stay at the school for the night, and leave first thing Thursday for Albion Hills outdoor education centre, located north of Bolton and about an hour's drive away from the Brampton school.

Pitkin spent much of the afternoon calling parents for permission, who were thrilled their children wouldn't miss out. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Giving sober second thought to drinking game

HALEY RYAN
Metro in Halifax

A Toronto man going to school in Halifax walks into a bank, takes out $100, and heads down Spring Garden Road.

But instead of hitting a downtown bar like students do from time to time, he hands two $20 bills to an unsuspecting woman asking for change, then $60 to a man playing guitar on the corner.

Stuart Johnson, a first-year Dalhousie University commerce student and member of the fraternity Phi Delta Theta, says he wanted his act of kindness caught on video to put a different spin on the "neknomination" drinking game.

Reportedly started in Australia, the game has spiralled on sites like Facebook and involves people posting videos where they chug a beer or other types of liquor in unusual settings and nominate two others to do the same.

"I just tried to do something a bit different with it because everyone was doing the same thing," said Johnson.

"I felt that if you're not doing anything good, why is it on video?"

Johnson said after being nominated on Monday, he already wanted to take the video in a different direction when a friend suggested helping out people asking for change on Spring Garden Road in a "nice nomination."

Phi Delta Theta is alcohol-free, and Johnson said the brothers are trying to show a different side of fraternity life in Halifax.

Stuart Johnson
JEFF HARPER/METRO IN HALIFAX

"You're always wondering what the public reaction is going to be," Johnson said."Many people have this predisposition against fraternities because they say it's just a bunch of drinking buddies."

The woman gave Johnson a hug after thanking him multiple times, and the man who was busking said he could now buy a new guitar case.

It felt "really cool" to help someone else, Johnson said.

Many people around the world are turning to acts of kindness nominations like Johnson's instead of downing alcohol, like a man in South Africa who gave lunch to a man on the street.

It would be great to see these overtake the drinking videos, Johnson said, but added it wasn't his place to tell others what to do.

"I did something and hopefully it motivates some other people to do something along those lines — that was my goal," Johnson said.

Paralympics. As the world's focus turns to Sochi, Canada's disabled athletes 'can't wait' to show their country what they can do

JESSICA SMITH CROSS

Thirty days before the Paralympic Games begin in Sochi, a few members of the Canadian men's sledge hockey team took the ice with some potential future Olympians.

Sofia Smith, 11, is playing her first season of sledge hockey as a forward with the Mississauga Cruisers this year. Getting to share the ice at the Mattamy Athletic Centre, the former Maple Leaf Gardens, with 2014 Team Canada members Greg Westlake, Billy Bridges and Brad Bowden was "pretty cool," she said.

On the ice, she helped one sledge newbie (me) learn how to move, shoot the puck and get up after tipping over.

"It's cool, it's like hockey, and join if you want," she said.

The Canadian Paralympic Committee and corporate sponsors organized the event where sledge hockey stars and young players got to teach members of the media how to play.

Francois Robert, an executive director of the Canadian Paralympic Committee, said the Vancouver Games were a catalyst for Paralympic sports in Canada, bringing greater funding and support.

"Paralympic sport has become mainstream," he said.

Jacob Calvert, 14, captain of the Mississauga Cruisers, said he thinks that increased awareness is a great thing. He began playing six years ago, and said what he loves about the game is meeting new people, the competition and "the ability to get better as you go."

"I went to a tryout one summer and I just got hooked," he said.

While he's close to perfecting his technique, he said the skills he saw from the Team Canada players on the ice were "phenomenal."

Former Team Canada member Paul Rosen emceed the event, and said he began to play after his leg was amputated in 1999 because of a post-operation infection. Initially, he was told he only had months to live.

"I never thought the next 10 years would be the greatest 10 years of my life," he said. "I got to play with some of the most incredible athletes in the world, who happen to be disabled."

Funding and support means the world for Paralympic athletes, he said. When he began playing, they had to pay their own way.

"When it comes to hockey, don't just think Wickenheiser and Crosby, think Bridges, Bowden and Westlake, too, because sledge hockey is the most incredible game you will ever see. I guarantee it."

Westlake, captain of Canada's team, said he's going to "fight tooth and nail to get back on top of that podium."

Canada's team won in 2006, but finished a disappointing fourth in 2010.

"We can't wait to get out there, show everybody our skill level, show everybody the pride we have in our country," Westlake said.

Sochi. Some heading to the Games reporting 'hassle-free' security

Despite a temporary Russian ban on liquids in carry-on luggage, some air travellers heading to the Sochi Olympics through Moscow have brought toothpaste and other toiletries past security checkpoints without any problems.

Security concerns ahead of the Sochi Games were renewed after the U.S. Homeland Security Department warned airlines flying to Russia that terrorists may try to smuggle explosives into the country in toothpaste tubes.

Yet six Associated Press employees arriving in Moscow from across the world or beginning their journey there passed through security without having to remove toothpaste, hand lotion or water bottles.

Another AP journalist, arriving in Moscow from Singapore, said a security official checked his deodorant and then returned it, but didn't make mention of a small tube of toothpaste.

Others heading to Sochi said their experience of airport security was surprisingly hassle-free.

Anti-gay law. Diversity group and Toronto agency collaborate in the creation of a new ad for the Sochi Games

The Olympics have always been a little bit gay.

At least, that's the idea behind a new ad released just days prior to the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi.

The ad shows two male figures thrusting back and forth as they prepare to take off luge sledding.

The 30-second spot was a last minute collaboration between the Canadian Institute of Diversity and Inclusion and Rethink creative agency in Toronto.

Backed with the popular 1980s tune "Don't You Want Me" by The Human League, it ends with the words: "The Games have always been a little gay. Let's fight to keep them that way."

While homosexuality is no longer illegal in the Olympic host country, it passed a law barring the promotion of "non-traditional sexual relations" to minors.

And with hours left before the Games open Friday, Human Rights Watch expressed concerns homophobic violence, including luring, attacking and shaming, is escalating.

The ad is online only because of limited funds. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

ACCOUNTABILITY KEY TO A CUSTOMER-LED TTC

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Our Five-Year Corporate Plan to modernize the TTC from top to bottom involves a lot more than the purchase of new vehicles and renewal of infrastructure, important though such investment is.

We must also re-engineer our processes, so that decisions are customer-led, rather than production-led. In other words, I want my team to always have the customer in mind in everything we do, rather than having procedures that are, or that appear to be, designed for our own convenience.

The other challenge is to transform the leadership culture at the TTC so local issues are effectively and proactively managed, and so that, ultimately, satisfied customers and motivated TTC employees enjoy a more positive and mutually respectful relationship.

A key part of our transformation has been to instill a culture of accountability and transparency in everything we do.

To that end, we hold regular "Meet the Manager" sessions across the network where customers can meet and give direct feedback to me and my senior team. We also post "explainer" videos on our You Tube channel to keep customers informed about the TTC and why we do what we do. We also post daily, monthly and quarterly performance statistics on our website so that you can hold us to account on initiatives that have been put in place over the last two-and-a-half years.

All TTC managers and supervisors have been issued with name badges. My expectation is that they wear these when riding the TTC, making it easier for you to know who we are if you need help or to simply ask a question.

Much remains to be done. But we are determined to transform the TTC and to deliver a transit system that makes Toronto proud.

Next four "Meet the Manager" sessions. Check ttc.ca for more details:

- March 5, 5 p.m. Kipling Station
- March 18, 7:30 a.m. Finch Station

Trolley buses were widely introduced to Toronto in the late 1940s. The first routes to see the trolley buses were Lansdowne, Annette and Ossington. They also served on Weston Road, Nortown, Yonge, Junction, Bay and finally Mount Pleasant. This photo is from the late 1970s. The trolley buses were last used in Toronto in 1993.

Ongoing, scheduled construction of the second platform at Union Station means no subway service between Union and St Andrew stations on Saturday, Feb. 8, and Sunday, Feb. 9.

All trains on the Yonge line will terminate southbound at Union Station. All trains on the University-Spadina line will terminate southbound at St Andrew Station. Customers must use the Yonge line to reach Union Station, especially those heading to Maple Leafs game at the Air Canada Centre this Saturday.

For customers who require accessible transit, a Wheel-Trans vehicle will be available. Customers are asked to speak with any uniformed TTC employee at either Union or St Andrew station.

Regular subway service will resume on Monday, Feb. 10, at 6 a.m.

THE FUTURE OF FOOD?

Founder of Soylent says healthy food is expensive and difficult to prepare — and his controversial meal replacement product could be coming to Canada

jessica.smithcross@metronews.ca

Canadians won't have to wait for a far-off dystopian future to try the controversial Soylent meal replacement product, as the inventor says the company is eyeing Canada as its first international market after it begins shipping to U.S. customers on March 1.

CEO Rob Rhinehart was an electrical engineer at a start-up in California, with insufficient time and money to eat well, when he decided to create something fast and cheap that contains everything humans need to survive.

Soylent comes in two packets, powder and oil, that are mixed with water to form a grayish liquid. It contains no people and costs less than $10 a day.

"Traditionally, healthy food can be very difficult to prepare and very expensive," said Rhinehart. Soylent has a nutrition label that shows a full complement of nutrients, along with carbs, protein and fibre.

"There's a lot of regulation in food," said Rhinehart. "We have gone through all of the hurdles and testing and labelling and process control."

Rhinehart said the label doesn't tell the whole story — that Soylent has a complete amino acid profile and, according to the company's tests, a low glycemic index.

Rhinehart was Soylent's first test subject and he lives "90 per cent" on Soylent today, eating only the occasional social meal. He's gone through long periods of eating only Soylent, and "beta testers" — a tech term for people who try out a new product before it's release — have done the same.

Soylent raised more than $2 million in pre-orders and found venture capital support. It has a community of DIY Soylent makers working on their own Soylent-like food hacks.

It also has many critics.

Two Canadian doctors who are experts in nutrition recommended that consumers wait until Soylent undergoes clinical testing.

Dr. David Lau, a professor of medicine biochemistry and molecular biology at the University of Calgary and the president of Obesity Canada, said Soylent's ingredients "appear very complete," but he's concerned about how well they will be absorbed.

Gut flora, the micro-organisms that live in the digestive tract, are essential to human health but are still not well understood and the effect a Soylent diet would have is unknown, he said.

He said using beta testers is "hocus pocus" and doesn't replace clinical trials that could determine the long-term effects of Soylent.

Dr. David Jenkins, a University of Toronto professor and the Canada research chair in nutrition and metabolism, said he'd like to see testing on the product's glycemic index. How the body absorbs Soylent and its post-meal effects are essential to understanding how useful and healthy it is, he said.

Rhinehart has dealt with similar concerns in the past. "If this becomes a problem the amounts can be changed to compensate," he wrote in a post on his site.

Flu shot was 74% effective: Study

A new Canadian study suggests this year's flu shot offered good protection to people who received it. The study says the shot was 74 per cent effective at preventing flu so severe that people needed medical treatment.

That's substantially better than last year, when the same researchers found the vaccine only cut cases of medically attended influenza by about 40 per cent.

Drummer in PM's band charged with sex assault

Schoolteacher suspended. Allegations of interference with two girls under the age of 14

JOE LOFARO
Metro in Ottawa

The RCMP says Phillip I. Nolan, who plays drums in a band that often accompanies Prime Minister Stephen Harper, is facing charges of sexual assault and sexual interference against two girls.

A spokesman for Harper says the Prime Minister's Office is "shocked and disturbed" by the charges, which allegedly involve two girls under the age of 14 at the time of the incidents.

Nolan, 43, is also a teacher at Avalon Public School, a middle school in east Ottawa. The Ottawa-Carleton District School Board said in a statement Nolan was removed from the classroom when an investigation began and was suspended Thursday after Ottawa police laid the charges.

Nolan faces five counts each of sexual assault, sexual interference, and sexual exploitation.

After a court released him on a $5,000 bond Thursday afternoon, his Toronto-based lawyer, Lou Strezos, said his client is also "very shocked" about the charges.

"He has no criminal record," said Strezos. "He maintains his innocence."

Police allege the incidents took place between 1998 and 2000 during Nolan's tenure as a teacher of Grade 7 and 8 students.

Police said they are concerned there could be other complainants in the case.

"We are obviously shocked and disturbed by these serious charges," Harper's communications director Jason MacDonald said in a statement.

"No allegations of this nature have ever been brought to our attention. Anyone found guilty of these charges should face the full force of the law."

'Out on the ice, you can hear everything.' Olympic gold-medallist and Canadian hockey hero overcame taunts, insults to succeed

FERNANDO CARNEIRO
Metro in Toronto

Cherie Piper is a Canadian hockey hero.

So who would bully her?

Me. And a good many others from my high school.

In 1996, Piper's high school, Albert Campbell CI, played my school, Sir Winston Churchill, in the Scarborough B finals.

When we met last month, Piper said she remembers that game well. "Out on the ice, you can hear everything that's yelled," she said. Ouch!

Churchill had a bus full of students at the arena to cheer on our girls. And we didn't know the difference between supporting our team and putting down the opposition.

And Piper was the opposition. She skated circles around our girls and scored most goals in the blowout that followed.

Sharon Mejia, now 34, played against Piper.

"It was very frustrating, because she was clearly way above everybody else on the team," Mejia said.

So the Churchill crowd, mostly boys who saw the game as an opportunity to skip class, booed Piper. A lot.

"We were rowdy. We said things to bring her confidence down," said Imer Hernandez, who was in the stands.

Mejia said the more Piper was booed, the more she seemed to want the puck, and as Campbell ran up the score, the more insulting the Churchill kids became. The insults eventually turned sexual.

I was there, as Churchill's mascot, wearing a bulldog costume with an oversized head. I remember looking through the eyeholes and seeing Piper's dad put his arm around her mom as she wiped her eyes.

"My mom and dad used their energy to protect me," Piper said.

While people accused her of embarrassing the other team, Piper said she thought of her teammates, many using equipment borrowed from Piper.

"Our goalie one year had never put on skates before," Piper said. "I used to run skating drills with the girls."

She remembers their weekly practices well. "Nobody understands how much fun we had as a team," she said.

Nearly 16 years later, Hernandez said he's impressed by Piper's mental toughness.

"She was so young. I'd like to congratulate her for playing to the best of her ability while blocking all that."

As rough as the insults hurled at Piper in the Scarborough finals were, she said they're far from the worst.

Due to a shortage of girls playing hockey, when Piper was eight, her parents had the choice of enrolling her in an under-16 women's league or a team of eight-year-old boys. They chose the boys' league.

"Some of the worst things were things that mothers from the other team would yell at me. They would tell their sons to go injure me or kill me," Piper said. "They couldn't handle the fact that their son was beat by a girl."

The behaviour of the Churchill kids at the Scarborough finals is learned behaviour, Piper said. She's now in a position to influence children differently — since retiring from the national team, she has become a teacher for Blyth Academy in Whitby.

"In my classroom there's no putting people down. There's no treating people differently," Piper said. "Retirement (from hockey) has been nice. I'm just enjoying being a normal person and not having to be at the rink or practice all the time."

When we parted, I apologized on behalf of Churchill.

She accepted it graciously.

Little Cherie

The girl? She's the one who scored on you

The first time Chris Piper watched her daughter climb a rope in gymnastics she was in for a big surprise. "Oh my God! That's my kid?" she asked.

While most other children were wobbling along, Cherie made it to the top.

To her mom, it was unfair that as a child Cherie was singled out for being "too good" and for taking up a spot on a boy's team.

"We would be at a tournament and hear parents talk about one team having a girl. They wouldn't look at the top players, they always guessed the boy with the long hair. They would yell at him and say that he shouldn't be on the ice," Chris Piper said. "I would reply, 'See the player who just put the puck in your net? That's the girl.'"

But there were times when Cherie cried.

"I said, 'Honey, if you want to quit, make it your decision. Don't let those people make the decision for you.'"

Female circumcision. Opposition grows in Mali

When Dicko Ongoiba was a little girl, female genital cutting was such an established tradition that no one in her community discussed it.

Like her mother did, 40-year-old Ongoiba subjected her first six daughters to what is sometimes referred to as female circumcision. But she has since learned more about ramifications, and now she wants to spare her two youngest daughters.

On Thursday, the International Day of Zero Tolerance to Genital Mutilation, Ongoiba joined hundreds of residents of a town outside Mali's capital for a public declaration swearing off female genital cutting, which affects 89 per cent of Mali's women.

It was the second public declaration organized in Mali by the non-governmental organization Tostan, which has worked with 7,000 communities in eight African countries to denounce cutting.

Although community leaders sometimes justify the practice on religious grounds, in recent years a growing number of religious leaders have noted there is no mention of female genital cutting in the Qur'an.

What it is

Female circumcision involves removing some or all of a girl's external genitals, usually without anesthesia, leading to the loss of sexual pleasure, but also more difficult childbirths, urinary incontinence and other complications.

Saudi university. Male paramedics not given immediate permission to enter campus to treat female: Witness

Thousands of Saudis vented their anger online over a report Thursday that staff at a Riyadh university had barred male paramedics from entering a women's-only campus to assist a student who had suffered a heart attack and later died.

The Okaz newspaper said administrators at the King Saud University impeded efforts by the paramedics to save the student's life because of rules banning men from being onsite. According to the paper, the incident took place on Wednesday and the university staff took an hour before allowing the paramedics in.

However, the university's rector, Badran Al-Omar, denied the report, saying there was no hesitation in letting the paramedics in. He said the university did all it could to save the life of the student, who was identified as Amna Bawazeer.

Al-Omar told The Associated Press that after the incident, he met Bawazeer's father, who told him his daughter had heart problems. The rector said Bawazeer suffered a heart attack and collapsed suddenly on the campus on Wednesday.

Her death sparked a debate on Twitter by Saudis who created a hashtag to talk about the incident. In the debate, many Saudis said the kingdom's strictly enforced rules governing the segregation of the sexes were to blame for the delay in helping Bawazeer.

Following Wednesday's incident, professors at King Saud University also demanded an investigation.

One staff member who witnessed the situation said paramedics were not called immediately. She said they were also not given immediate permission to enter the campus and that it appeared that the female dean of the university and the female dean of the college of social studies panicked.

Al-Omar said the staff called campus health officials within minutes of Bawazeer collapsing and that about 25 minutes later they called paramedics.

Saudi Arabia follows a strict interpretation of Islam. Sexes are segregated in schools and almost all Saudi universities. Women also have separate seating areas and often separate entrances in "family" sections of restaurants and cafes where single males are not allowed. The kingdom's top cleric has warned against the mixing of the genders, saying it poses a threat to female chastity and society.

In a shocking tragedy in 2002, a fire broke out at a girl's school in Mecca, killing 15 students. Rights groups reported that religious police would not allow the girls to escape because they were not wearing headscarves or abayas, a traditional loose black cloak that covers the female body from the neck down.

While religious police denied they blocked girls from fleeing and a government inquiry found the school was ill-equipped to handle emergencies, the incident led to the overhaul of women's education.

Will BlackBerry meet its Waterloo in keyboard battle?

Or will it be Seacrest out? Typo Products and Canada-based company in war of words over QWERTY add-on for iPhone 5 or 5S

Typo Products' iPhone keyboard case.
TYPO PRODUCTS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Typo Products says BlackBerry is trying to hold a monopoly over smartphone keyboards, and that it shouldn't have to take its new iPhone case off the market.

The Los Angeles-based company, co-founded by American Idol host Ryan Seacrest, filed documents Wednesday in a California court defending itself against a patent infringement lawsuit.

BlackBerry accuses Typo of copying its keyboard design in an effort to capitalize on the smartphone maker's "commercial recognition and goodwill."

The company is seeking numerous rulings, including damages from Typo, all of Typo's profits and a stop to future sales of the keyboard technology.

The suit was filed in January and none of the allegations have been tested in court.

Typo disputes the claims made by BlackBerry. The Typo case attaches to an iPhone 5 or 5S, the most recent Apple smartphone models, both of which have touchscreen keyboards.

In its response, Typo attached pictures of various keyboard designs that date as far back as Smith Corona typewriters.

"The QWERTY keyboard has been around since the 1870s and has been present in many messaging devices," Typo said in the documents.

SCENE 2

Synopsis

Based on the book The Monuments Men: Allied Heroes, Nazi Thieves and the Greatest Treasure Hunt in History by Robert M. Edsel, the movie stars Clooney, Matt Damon, Bill Murray, John Goodman, Jean Dujardin, Bob Balaban and Hugh Bonneville as a motley crew of art historians, engineers and museum directors recruited to locate and rescue priceless art works stolen by the Nazis. When two members of their team are killed they are no longer observers but active participants in the war.

Nothing monumental

The Monuments Men. George-Clooney-penned story about saving art in the Second World War skews a little too sentimental

Richard: Mark, this is a wartime comedy. Think Hogan's Heroes by way of Leonardo Da Vinci and you'll get the idea. It has some mild laughs — the biggest giggle, for Canadians anyway, comes from the Parisians who blame Matt Damon's terrible French on having spent too much time in Montreal — but also a great deal of reverence for the art and the work of the real-life monuments men. But what might have been an edgy, exciting look at an underreported slice of World War II history is reduced to an elegantly directed but somewhat dull film.

Mark: Richard, I was really looking forward to this movie. Three of my major obsessions are George Clooney, Nazis and art, although not necessarily in that order. But you're right; the movie is kind of a snooze in parts. There are some great scenes, but they don't quite add up. And at no time did I feel much of a sense of danger, probably because the war is ending and the Germans are already on the run. The great cast is mostly split up during the movie, so the expected camaraderie is absent. But there's one great reason to see this movie, and that's the prominent role of prickly nerd Bob Balaban.

RC: The cast is terrific. Balaban is a great actor, and an underused one, so it's always cool to see him trotted out in anything, but for me Bill Murray shows, once again, in a brief scene in a shower (no spoilers here), how his understated style can move an audience. No problems with the acting, but co-writers Clooney and longtime collaborator Grant Heslov appear to have taken a dose of sentimentality pills before putting pen to paper. The earnest, reverential tone is reinforced by old school pacing that focuses on the character and art over action and a rousing soundtrack that sounds airlifted in from a classic wartime era movie.

MB: Bill Murray, as always, proves that less is indeed more. There's a quasi-romance between Matt Damon and Cate Blanchett that seemed forced to me, not to mention she wears the ugliest pair of shoes in the history of cinema. But all through the movie there's a moral dilemma that keeps being rammed down our throats. Is art valuable enough to risk human life for? The movie tells us over and over that it is, but to be honest, Richard, I'm not so sure. And if you're not sure, the urgency falls apart.

RC: It seems like you noticed Blanchett's shoes more than the art. Therein lies the movie's central problem.

MB: Well, I'm more of a modernist anyway. When they tell the story of how the Germans burned the Klees, Braques, and Picassos I nearly wept. This isn't a bad movie, Richard. I just hoped for a great one.

Abbie Cornish on a Robocop rewind

A simpler time. Australian actress reminisces about watching 1980s classic until her VHS tape wore out

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Robocop, starring Abbie Cornish, opens next Wednesday. CONTRIBUTED

Abbie Cornish has fond memories of the original Robocop, having grown up in Australia watching, re-watching and eventually wearing out a VHS copy of the 1987 film at far too young an age, thanks to her older brothers. So she hopes other fans of Paul Verhoeven's ultra-violent action flick will take her involvement in José Padilha's PG-13 remake as a major vote of confidence.

It was a different time, when you had to worry about VHS tapes wearing out.

And it was so devastating when they did — or if they tore! And sometimes you couldn't replace them either. It seems so silly, you'd be 10 years later trying to find another VHS of Robocop and you can't. It's like all of a sudden it becomes a collector's item.

What were some of your favourite parts of the original?

I mean, that scene is crazy when he goes in on his own and he gets blown apart. I know it sounds really violent because I was, like, 5 or 6 when I watched that, but that scene is just insane. It's really classic. I love that movie. I really enjoyed watching it again. I watched it a couple of times before we made the movie, and people were like, 'Don't do that!' I was like, 'But I love it!'

Animation

The Lego Movie

Director. Phil Lord, Christopher Miller

Stars. Chris Pratt, Elizabeth Banks

This story follows Emmet (Chris Pratt), an ordinary, rules-following, perfectly average LEGO mini-figure who is mistakenly identified as the most extraordinary person and the key to saving the world. He is drafted into a fellowship of strangers on an epic quest to stop an evil tyrant, a journey for which Emmet is hopelessly and hilariously under-prepared.

Action-Comedy

Vampire Academy

Director. Mark Waters

Stars. Zoey Deutch, Lucy Fry, Daniela Kozlovsky

Rose Hathaway (Deutch) is a Dhampir: half human-vampire, guardians of the Moroi, peaceful, mortal vampires living discretely within our world. Her legacy is to protect the Moroi from bloodthirsty, immortal Vampires, the Strigoi. This is her story.

Documentary

Visitors

Director. Godfrey Reggio

Thirty years after Koyaanisqatsi, Godfrey Reggio, with the support of Philip Glass and Jon Kane, once again leapfrogs over earth-bound filmmakers and creates another stunning, wordless portrait of modern life. Presented by Steven Soderbergh in black and white 4K digital projection, Visitors reveals humanity's trancelike relationship with technology, which, when commandeered by extreme emotional states, produces massive effects far beyond the human species.

Comedy/Romance

That Awkward Moment

Director. Tom Gormican

Stars. Zac Efron, Michael B. Jordan

Zac Efron, Miles Teller and Michael B. Jordan star in the R-rated comedy, That Awkward Moment, about three best friends who find themselves where we've all been- at that confusing "moment" in every dating relationship when you have to decide "So...where is this going?"

Drama/Romance

Labor Day

Director. Jason Reitman

Stars. Josh Brolin, Kate Winslet

Labor Day centres on 13-year-old Henry Wheeler, who struggles to be the man of his house and care for his reclusive mother Adele. On a back-to-school shopping trip, Henry and his mother encounter Frank Chambers, a man both intimidating and clearly in need of help, who convinces them to take him into their home and later is revealed to be an escaped convict.

Drama/Thriller

Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit

Director. Kenneth Branagh

Stars. Chris Pine, Keira Knightley

Based on the character created by bestselling author Tom Clancy, this original story follows a young Jack (Chris Pine) as he uncovers a financial terrorist plot. The story follows him from 9/11 through his tour of duty in Afghanistan, which scarred him forever, and into his early days in the financial intelligence unit of the modern CIA, where he becomes an analyst.

Sorkin delivers candid opinion on Hoffman death

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Philip Seymour Hoffman and writer Aaron Sorkin worked together only once, on Sorkin's film Charlie Wilson's War. But they had an important thing in common: They were both recovering addicts.

In the wake of Hoffman's death, the Newsroom creator is sharing some of his conversations with him. In an obituary for Time, he writes that Hoffman told him, "If one of us dies of an overdose, probably 10 people who were about to won't." In other words, Sorkin writes, the death of a famous addict might scare a few other people on the edge into getting clean, and that's why, he says, it's important to be clear that Hoffman didn't die because he did heroin wrong, but because he did it at all.

"(Hoffman) did not die from an overdose of heroin — he died from heroin. We should stop implying that if he'd just taken the proper amount then everything would have been fine.

"He didn't die because he was partying too hard or because he was depressed," he added, "He died because he was an addict.

Vanity Fair offers Paltrow olive branch despite feud

This should be interesting.

Despite the feud between Gwyneth Paltrow and Vanity Fair, during which she reportedly instructed A-list friends to not work with the magazine or attend its events because of its planned "epic take-down" of her, editor Graydon Carter has included Paltrow on the invite list for its annual Oscar party, according to E! News.

Whether or not she attends, however, is yet to be seen. Carter did divulge, though, that rumours of plans for a counter-party were apparently fabricated. "There were reports that she was trying to scuttle our annual Oscar party, that she was going to organize a competing dinner," Carter says. "The Paltrow camp subsequently denied both claims."

Is Foxx in Cruise control mode by keeping Katie a secret?

Jamie Foxx

Jamie Foxx and Katie Holmes can't seem to dodge rumours that they're secretly an item.

According to Page Six, Foxx and Holmes have been seeing each other since last summer but are keeping the romance hush-hush out of respect for Holmes' ex-husband, Tom Cruise. "Jamie is being careful because he has a lot of respect for Tom," a source says. When rumours first circulated about the pair last August, Foxx vehemently denied them.

Liquid Assets

Pinot Gris vs. Pinot Grigio

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Here's a question I was asked this week: Why do some vineyards call their wines Pinot Gris while others use Pinot Grigio?

Well, the white grape is French so Pinot Gris is its original name. Italy grows a clone of Pinot Gris that they call Pinot Grigio, well, because they're Italian, and which is lighter and crisper than the French versions.

Lots of other countries grow Pinot Gris and deciding on how to spell it is a combination of flavour profile and marketing savvy. Some feel Gris sounds more sophisticated. Others produce a richer wine that they think compares to a French Pinot Gris so go with that spelling.

Since the popularity of Pinot Grigio is undeniable (which translates to profitable) the majority of countries who grow Gris choose to use it.

South Africa's Two Oceans 2013 Pinot Grigio ($10.25 - $11.29) is a great example. Clean, bright and relaxed, it pays enough homage to its Italian cousins to make it more than worthy of the name.

Try with mussels, white fish, chicken, vegetable dishes and semi-soft cheeses. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

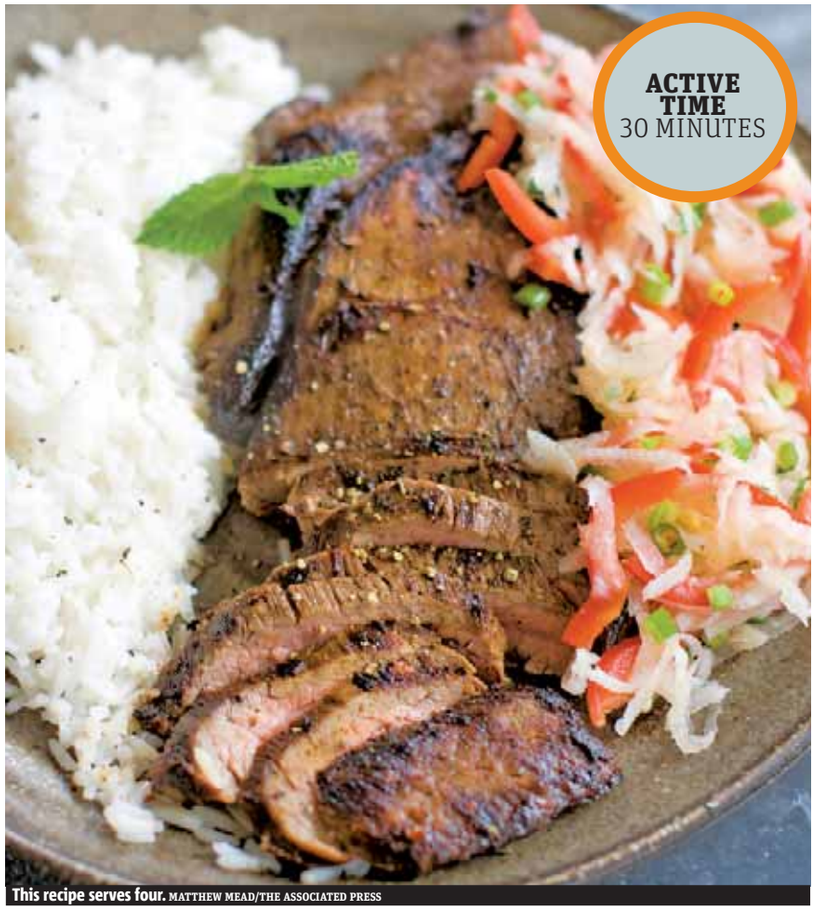
Pan Seared Flank Steak and Daikon Slaw. Dress up the classic cut of meat



This recipe serves four. MATTHEW MEAD/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Start by marinating the flank steak in five-spice powder, rice vinegar and soy sauce. Then while the steak is absorbing all those rich flavours, grate a daikon radish (they resemble giant white carrots, but have a mild peppery bite) and toss it with grated fresh ginger, scallions and red bell pepper for a simple slaw with just enough assertiveness to cut through the savory heft of the steak.

If you want to keep this dish lean, serve it over brown rice. But if you are willing to embrace carbs, try it on a bun.

Ingredients

- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper
- 1 tsp five-spice powder
- 1/2 tsp red pepper flakes
- 4 1/2 tbsp rice vinegar, divided
- 2 tbsp low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 lb flank steak
- 1 cup shredded daikon radish, patted dry with paper towels
- 1 red bell pepper, cored and sliced into thin matchsticks
- 1 1/2 tsp grated fresh ginger
- Pinch of salt
- 4 scallions, thinly sliced
- 1 tbsp canola or vegetable oil

1. In zip-close plastic bag, mix black pepper, five-spice powder, red pepper flakes, 3 tablespoons of the vinegar and soy sauce. Add flank steak, seal bag, then turn to coat evenly. Refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 2 hours.

2. Meanwhile, in bowl, stir together the daikon radish, bell pepper, ginger, salt, the remaining 1 1/2 tablespoons of vinegar and the scallions. Set aside.

3. When you are ready to cook the steak, in a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the steak and sear for 4 minutes per side, or until desired doneness. Allow the steak to rest on a cutting board for 8 minutes. Slice the steak thinly across the grain, then serve with the slaw.

motionball

Date: Feb. 7
Location: Liberty Grand, 25 British Columbia Rd.

It's back, baby. ThreeSixty-Five Gala, presented by Air Miles Canada, is once again taking over Liberty Grand to host its 13th annual gala. Carmen Electra will be co-hosting and there will be live performances by Skratch Bastid, Running Red Lights, DJ Efsharp, DJ Dopey & DJ Don Mescal, an Under Armour Fashion Show, a live art performance, and 100 silent auction prizes. Oh, and it's all for charity. How could you go wrong?

PawsParty

Date: Feb. 12
Location: The Hoxton, 69 Bathurst St.

Saving dogs' lives and getting a chance to hook up? No, this isn't some firemen fantasy camp, it's PawsParty 2014. There'll be an old school love note wall, the Dawg Show and the auctioning of some of the city's steamiest bachelors for a date on Valentine's Day at a hot Toronto restaurant, which should also draw some attention. Already have a date? No problem, drop the hunk but keep the reso. And yes, there will be puppies at the party too.

360 Screenings

Date: Feb. 7 & 8
Location: Not yet revealed

Ever wanted to be in a movie? Not star in it, but actually live in that reality? 360 Screenings provides a cinematic experience that caters to that desire. Not only will you watch a film, you'll interact with live theatre installations and become a part of the essence of the film itself. The location, a Toronto heritage building, is kept secret until 24 hours prior to the screening. The theme this time around is love.

Grilled Cheese Fest

Date: Feb. 28
Location: Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St.

Everyone's favourite I-can-make-this-myself sandwich finally gets its day in the sun. Toronto's top cheese masters, including the Leslieville Cheese Market, Cut The Cheese, and Cheesewerks, will be grilling up some of the greatest comfort food you've ever had. Add in gourmet soup pairings and Creemore Springs beer and we're pretty sure we're going to have to be removed by force.

St. Louis slides into Stamkos' Sochi spot

Hockey. Last season's Art Ross trophy winner will replace younger Lightning teammate on Team Canada

Martin St. Louis is going to get a chance to represent his country at the Winter Olympics after all.

Hockey Canada announced Thursday that the 38-year-old Tampa Bay forward will replace injured Lightning teammate Steven Stamkos on Canada's men's hockey team at the Sochi Olympics.

"I heard from Stammer that he wasn't going to go, so I knew it was a possibility," St. Louis told reporters in Tampa on Thursday. "So I guess I was prepared for it."

St. Louis said he felt bad for Stamkos, who tried hard to come back from a broken right tibia he suffered in a Nov. 11 NHL game before being ruled out of Olympic competition by the Lightning's medical staff on Wednesday.

"I think we've got to understand how hard he's tried and worked to put himself in the position he's in and give himself a chance," St. Louis said.

"Obviously he's disappointed and I'm disappointed for him. Stammer's a true professional and he's done everything he can this past month to get back to the Lightning first and hopefully to Team Canada."

St. Louis was considered one of Canada's most surprising snubs when Canada's team was first announced, along with Philadelphia forward Claude Giroux and Pittsburgh forward James Neal.

The Laval, Que., native led the league in points in the 2012-13 shortened season with 17 goals and 43 assists in 48 games.

After the snub

Martin St. Louis went on a 10-game point streak (eight goals, six assists) for the Lightning starting Jan. 7, the day the team was announced. He said the snub had nothing to do with his increased production, but his play of late might have given him the edge over Claude Giroux and James Neal.

Ovechkin defends Games' host city

Alex Ovechkin wants Sochi's critics to knock it off.

The Russian Olympian and face of the Games told reporters at the Washington Capitals' morning skate Thursday that people were going out of their way to find faults.

"I've been in three Olympic Games. And I remember Torino and Vancouver and nobody said about something bad in Vancouver or Torino," Ovechkin said in Arlington, Va. "And why you guys always have something, try to find some bad things in Sochi ...

"Enjoy it and don't like find like bad stuff out there. Everything, like, in Torino we lived where construction was and nobody say about that."

Most of the problems documented in Sochi this week have had to do with hotels for visiting media members not being finished and problems like no hot water and light bulbs in rooms. THE CANADIAN PRESS

In a statement issued by the Canucks Thursday, Sedin said he's physically unable to play for Sweden.

"I'm disappointed not to be physically able to represent my country at the Winter Olympic Games," Sedin said. "This is a difficult decision but ultimately the best decision for me personally, Team Sweden and the Vancouver Canucks. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Figure skating. Canada in second following Duhamel and Radford's 'ultimate moment' in pairs short program

Canada's Meagan Duhamel and Eric Radford compete in the pairs portion of the figure skating team event at the Sochi Winter Olympics on Thursday. PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Patrick Chan did a mock baton pass to teammates Meagan Duhamel and Eric Radford down in the warmup area of the Iceberg Skating Palace between events Thursday night.

Canada's pairs team took it and ran.

Duhamel and Radford had perhaps the skate of their careers Thursday to put Canada in second place of the inaugural team figure skating event at the Sochi Olympics, just two points behind Russia.

Duhamel, from Lively, Ont., and Radford, from Balmertown, Ont., were second in the pairs short program after three-time world champion Chan finished third in the men's short.

"I think that was the greatest feeling," said Duhamel, who clasped both hands over her mouth after the music stopped. "It's not the points, it's not the winning, it's not Canada winning a medal.

"To perform like that and finish our program with that feeling we had, it's every athlete's dream here in Sochi and at any Olympics, and we just did it, we just lived the ultimate moment of every athlete in the world."

Russia leads with 19 points after Tatiana Volosozhar and Maxim Trankov finished first in the pairs short and veteran Evgeni Plushenko was a surprising second in the men's event. China is third with 15 points.

The team event continues with the short dance, women's short program and pairs long program Saturday.

The event's debut was a hit with the skaters and the crowd, which warmed up as the night went on. By the time Volosozhar and Trankov skated, the arena was rocking, spectators were chanting and stomping their feet.

"It was interesting to see the wave going around and I think the Germans had a cowbell," said Canadian captain Scott Moir. "It was fun. But it was hard for us not to go back to Vancouver personally, seeing the Russian team and Evgeni skate so well in front of a home crowd." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ogle on Google

The Canadian Olympian who's generating the biggest spike of search traffic on Google isn't Sidney Crosby, it isn't flag-bearer Hayley Wickenheiser, or any other hockey player. It's figure skater Tessa Virtue, who along with partner Scott Moir, won ice dancing gold in Vancouver in 2010.

- Crosby, captain of the men's hockey team, was second on Google's list, followed by Moir and Wickenheiser.

Luge. Slower track built to avoid repeat of tragedy from Vancouver Games

Canada's John Fennell goes through a training session for the luge on Thursday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Everyone knew the danger. An uneasiness hung in the frosted Canadian air four years ago. Nerves were on edge.

For good reason.

Just hours before the flame was ignited on Feb. 12, 2010 in Vancouver, an otherwise typical morning in the picture-perfect Blackcomb Mountains turned tragic.

Back in Lake Placid, N.Y., Aidan Kelly was on his computer in study hall monitoring the luge competitors as they took their final training runs on the Whistler track before the start of the Winter Olympics.

Without warning, the screen went dark. Disaster, as some feared would happen, came in an unimaginable flash.

In one moment, the sport of luge was forever changed.

"I was that nerd kid who watched everything about luge," said Kelly, a U.S. luger who was just 15 at the time and dreaming of competing in the Olympics. "The guy on the track was going and going and then ..."

And then Nodar Kumaritashvili, the slider Kelly was watching, was dead.

The worst-case scenario, the one foretold by startling speeds, experienced champions crashing during practice, even private predictions from sliding officials, had occurred. Kumaritashvili, an easygoing 21-year-old from a tiny skiing village in war-torn Georgia where his father and uncle raised him to slide, was thrown from his sled travelling at nearly 145 km/h, faster than he had ever gone before.

Unable to navigate the last turn of the treacherous track, Kumaritashvili, who had escaped injury during an earlier wreck, went feet-first into one wall, the impact somehow ricocheting his body off the track and the back of his head struck an exposed steel pole within sight of the finish line.

He died instantly.

His death sapped joy from the games, and raised questions about safety and whether the sliding sports — bobsled, skeleton and luge — had pushed the threshold of human performance too far in trying to see how fast highly trained athletes on wind-tunnel-tested, state-of-the-art equipment could go on ice.

To help prevent another serious mishap, organizers for the Sochi Games designed a slower track, but one they believe will still challenge the world's top sliders and drivers.

"I think it taught a lesson to a lot of people in the sport to take a lot more care when it comes to safety issues."

'Bummed': Work ahead for McMorris

Slopestyle. Canadian gold-medal favourite taken aback by judges' low marks in qualifying

Mark McMorris looked up at the scoreboard at Rosa Khutor Extreme Park on Thursday, shook his head and then voiced his displeasure.

The Canadian snowboarding star thought he had nailed his second run in the men's slopestyle qualifying round at the Sochi Olympics. The judges didn't agree and now the Regina native has to go through the semifinal round in order to advance to Saturday's final.

Mark's rib

"It's hurting mentally right now more than anything. I didn't get the score I wanted."

Regina snowboarder Mark McMorris who broke his rib in a crash at the X Games two weeks ago.

"I was bummed because I really had no thought in my mind that I wasn't in there," McMorris said. "I thought for sure I was going to be in. So it's kind of like a shot to the heart."

The top four riders in each of the two heats advanced straight to Saturday's 12-man final. McMorris, who finished seventh in his heat with 89.25 points, will compete in the semifinal earlier that day with 20 other riders who will be vying for the four remaining spots.

Reigning X Games champion Maxence Parrot of Bromont, Que., led the 29-man field with 97.50 points. Sebastien Toutant of L'Assomption, Que., also qualified for the final with a third-place finish in his heat (87.25).

Spencer O'Brien of Courtenay, B.C., reached the women's final with a third-place effort (82.75) while Jenna Blasman of Kitchener, Ont., was sixth in her heat (60.25) and will settle for a semifinal appearance.

Canadian ski sisters clinch spots in final

The Dufour-Lapointe sisters all have a spot in the women's moguls finals at the Sochi Olympics.

Defending champion Hannah Kearney of the United States cruised through qualifying on Thursday, posting a score of 23.05, well clear of Montreal's Chloe Dufour-Lapointe (22.64) for the top spot.

Justin Dufour-Lapointe THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Justine Dufour-Lapointe (22.28) took third and Maxime Dufour-Lapointe (20.88) finished eighth, assuring all three sisters a spot in the final.

All three sisters declined to speak to the media after qualifying to concentrate on preparing for Saturday's final.

Quebec City's Audrey Robichaud also qualified, placing ninth with a score of 20.61.

It's a return to Olympic competition for Robichaud, who qualified for the 2006 Turin Olympics at age 17 before missing out on the 2010 Vancouver Games.

She nearly missed out on these Games due to a knee injury. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pressure follows Olympians from Vancouver to Sochi

12 timezones away. Athletes are further from family but now closer to each other

Denny Morrison thought about the Vancouver Olympics every day for months before the 2010 Games. The long-track speedskater saw the Olympic Oval almost everywhere he looked.

"I could literally see it out my window — my living room, dining room, kitchen, it all lined up to the Oval," said Morrison, who took up residence in suburban Richmond, B.C., as the Canadian team trained for weeks at a time. "So I was thinking about it every day.... The pressure I put on myself in Vancouver was a lot more than what I feel here in Russia."

Denny Morrison of Fort St.John, B.C.
ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Morrison, a native of Fort St. John, B.C., who calls Calgary home, won a gold in team pursuit and Canada posted all-time highs in total medals (26) and golds (14).

Four years ago, Canada had home-field advantage at the Olympics. And with that came huge expectations and pressure — with family, friends and an entire nation peering over the athletes' shoulders

Four years on, Canada's 220 Olympians are 9,600 kilometres and 12 time zones away from Vancouver, nestled in an Olympic bubble perched on the edge of the Black Sea. For some, the pressure has been eased with each kilometre. For others, it remains a constant no matter where the Games take place.

The fans in the stands may no longer be solidly behind Canada but one can make the argument that the 2014 team may be a tighter crew. All but the women's cross-country skiers are living together in the athletes villages.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
It's important that you don't let anxieties get the better of you, especially where your health is concerned. You tend to fear the worst for no good reason at this time of year but eventually your fears will fade.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Put the finishing touches on something creative, something that could bring you the recognition you feel you deserve. Even if it doesn't make you rich and famous, it will still be a job well done.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
If you must get involved in a dispute between friends, make sure you are even-handed. If you give the impression that you favour one side more than the other, you will make things worse than if you had left it alone.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Change is good, change is positive, so whatever else you do today, don't fight the changes that come your way. You were designed by the cosmos try out new things.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
If you want something enough, you'll find a way to get it but it may cost you a great deal of time and energy. You have to decide whether the sacrifice is worth it.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You have this feeling that if you don't act quickly, you'll miss out on something big. Maybe you're right, but is it reall important? The planets urge you to focus on what you've already begun.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
What society tells you is important and what your inner voice tells you is important are likely to be different. You should never go against your instincts. SALLY BROMPTON
